CANADA POPULATION MAY BE MORE THAN 10,000,000 TOTAL

OTTAWA—With population figures complete for the three maritime provinces, Ontario and the three prairie provinces, it would appear that total population of the Dominion at the 1921 census would be well over the 10,000,000 mark.

With Quebec, British Columbia and the Northwest Territories yet to come the population is 8,753,429.

Placing these at the same figures as in the 1921 census the total for the Dominion would be approximately 9,881,000 so that to reach 10,000,000 on British Columbia and Quebec together would have to gain would be 111,900 and it is generally expected that their gains will be considerably more.

Mr. John Doyell, of Dohy, was visiting his mother Mrs. Wood.

MRS. H. McKINNON PASSES SUDDENLY

Mrs. Anna Gertrude McKinnon passed away suddenly on Saturday last, while visiting at the home of Mrs. Norman King at Fabryna at the age of 58 years. A sudden heart attack was the cause of her death.

From information to hand it is learned that Mr. McKinnon having to make a trip to Irma on Saturday took his wife along with him in the car so that she could visit with Mrs. King at Fabryna, while he continued his business trip westward. Mr. McKinnon was to call for his wife on the return trip.

After having completed his business (with an accident intervening as reported elsewhere in this issue) Mr. McKinnon returned to find that his wife had passed away as stated above.

The funeral service was held in the United Church on Monday afternoon when the pastor Rev. W. Huston conducted the last rites before a large gathering of sympathizers and friends. Two of the deceased's favorite hymns were included in the service.

The pallbearers were Messrs. J. Macdonald, W. Heffernan, C. Rowe, A. Beckitt, J. Patterson and D. Maunier, and on Tuesday morning McLeod's parlors who had charge of the arrangements shipped the body to Edmonton on the early train where interment took place later in the day.

She leaves to mourn her loss, besides her husband, two sons and two daughters, these being, May and Muriel, and James and Mordy. Mr. William Burton, of Edmonton, and Mr. Milton Burton, of Vancouver, are two surviving brothers.

Among the floral offerings of respect were:—The Family, wreath; sprays from Mrs. W. Budge & Mrs. Pearson, Mrs. Norman King, Mr. and Mrs. Heffernan, Mr. and Mrs. E. Fincore, Mr. and Mrs. A. Currie, Mr. and Mrs. J. Whitmore, Mr. J. Gage and the Edmonton branch of the Sun Life Assurance Co.

PLEASANT CARD PARTY HELD AT I.O.O.F. HALL

Owing no doubt to the fact that many other attractions arranged for the same evening, the card party which was arranged by the ladies of St. Luke's church on Thursday last to raise funds for the Sunday School Christmas tree was somewhat poorly attended, although each of those present had a real good time. The winners at cards were—Ladies: Mrs. J. Gage, 1; Mrs. O. Creteau, 2; the gentlemen winners being the husbands of these two ladies. The two second prizes were donated back to the funds and raffled off among those present at a later stage in the evening. After a splendid supper, a little dance was enjoyed before calling it a day!

The Christmas tree for the youngsters of St. Luke's church is to be held in the I.O.O.F. hall on Tuesday December 22nd, and they are all anxiously awaiting the big night!

We learn that the Bill Bibby Haulage have the contract for the trucking of the buffalo meat from the park slaughter-house to the railway siding for shipment.

URGE LICENSES FOR FARM DOGS

VARIETY OF RESOLUTIONS PASSED AT ALBERTA M.D. CONVENTION

EDMONTON—Farm dogs in Alberta will carry license tags in the future if a resolution passed at the twenty-third annual convention of the Alberta Association of Municipal Districts is finally approved by the Alberta legislature. Sheep breeders who were well represented at the session, stressed the need of securing adequate protection for their flocks from the dog menace.

Telephone Rates
Other resolutions passed were: Asking the province to lower the telephone rates to $1.50 a month; request on legislation placing the responsibility for the support of the families of persons serving prison terms on the provincial government; to have legislation introduced which would force banks and loan companies to charge an interest rate of not more than 5 per cent and a final resolution for legislation to compel all vehicles on provincial high ways to carry a red tail light after dark.

Calgary was selected as the convention city for 1932.

SHIP CANADIAN BARLEY

The Ontario Marketing Board, in co-operation with Dominion Seed Branch officials recently forwarded to Mr. W. C. Noxon, Ontario Agent General, in London, a fifty pound sample of Ontario grown barley as typical of what could be supplied in quantity for malting purposes.

Approval of this sample has been expressed in the very practical and acceptable form of orders for two carloads of barley, one of 2,000 bushels for Dublin and another of 1,500 bushels for London both of which will be shipped from Montreal late in November.

MEDICAL CLINIC HELD IN WAINWRIGHT

POST-GRADUATE TOUR BRINGS WELL-KNOWN SPECIALIST LECTURERS

The post-graduate medical clinic was held here last week in the Town Hall, was of a particularly high standard, and it was unfortunate that owing to the very severe weather conditions more of the doctors from this territory could not be present at the meetings which continued both afternoon and evening.

The travelling clinicians were both outstanding members of Toronto university hospital staff, these being Dr. Gordon A. McLarty, psychiatrist, and Dr. C. Stewart Wright, orthopaedic surgeon, and the clinic is a part of the work being done throughout the west in the interests of medical science. By this means our doctors are kept fully informed and closely in touch with all advancements through special lectures and lantern slides, in the treatment of sickness and disease, and without doubt much benefit is to be derived from these gatherings which are arranged by the Alberta Medical Association.

In addition to each of our local doctors, Dr. Folkens, of Chauvin, and Drs. York and Rich of Provost, were in attendance. Hearty votes of thanks were accorded the two visitors at the close of the sessions.

MODIFY CATTLE EMBARGO

Ministerial Order of November 9 removes the embargo on the importation of cattle from the Old Country in so far as Scotland is concerned. The order states that the removal is made because there have been no outbreaks of foot-and-mouth disease in Scotland over a satisfactory period. Animals from Scotland are embargoed at a port in Scotland on a vessel sailing direct to Canada without touching at an English port. The feed accompanying the cattle for use en route must also have been grown and stored in Scotland. The order permits consideration of applications for the importation of cattle sheep and swine from Scotland.

BUFFALO HUNTERS RETURN TO PLAINS

Echoes of story-book days on the Western plains are to be heard this week at our National Park when three devil buffalo hunters make a temporary return to the scenes of their epic deeds. In one immense roundup, 1500 animals from Canada's great herd of bison at Wainwright Park will be slaughtered to provide buffalo steaks and the skulls for many Canadians. A train of thirty empty refrigerator cars of the Canadian National Railways is in the yards placed in readiness for shipments of buffalo meat to all parts of the Dominion.

PROVINCE'S LIABILITY OVER FIVE & HALF MILL

ON WHEAT POOL ADVANCES FOR 1929; SECURED BY ELEVATORS

EDMONTON—Recent figures of Alberta's liability on account of wheat pool guarantees on bank advances for the crop of 1929 were $5,526,000, it was stated today by Hon. R. G. Reid, provincial treasurer. Public accounts for the fiscal year ending March 31 last, estimated them at approximately $6,000,000.

The liability is secured, it is pointed out by Mr. Reid, by a floating charge on the pool country elevators, which are cost-valued at $6,056,591, and such other properties as warehouses, dwellings, and Vancouver terminal elevator, valued at $2,990,679. With allowance for depreciation reserves, there is a net security of $3,041,358.

TWO NEW DEPUTY MINISTERS APPOINTED

Announcement was made last week in Edmonton of the appointment of two new deputy ministers of the government. The announcement was made by Hon. Robt. Reid, acting premier in the absence of Premier Brownlee. By this notice Mr. R. (Bob) English, who has been acting in the capacity for the past two years, becomes officially the deputy minister of municipal affairs and Mr. John Darvie, who was formerly known as director, is now the deputy minister of lands and mines. The first appointment is to date back to April 1st last, while the latter is dated November 1st.

The Lonely Voyage

(Author Unknowns)

Some time at eve when the tide is low
I shall slip my moorings and sail away
With no response to the friendly bay
Of kindred craft in the busy bay
In the silent hush of the twilight pale
When the night swoops down to embrace the day
And the voices call in the water's flow—
I shall slip my moorings and sail away
Through the purpling shadows that dangle trail
O'er the ebbing tide of the Unknown Sea.
I shall fare me away, with a dip of sail
And a ripple of water to tell the tale
Of a lonely voyager, sailing away
To the Mystic Isles where at anchor lay
The craft of those who have sailed before
O'er the Unknown Sea to the Unseen Shore.
A few who have watched me sail away
Will miss my craft from the busy bay
Some friendly barks that were anchored near,
Some loving souls that my heart held dear,
In silent sorrow will drop a tear
But I shall have peacefully furled my sail
In moonlight sheltered from storm and gale
And greeted friends who have sailed before,
O'er the Unknown Sea to the Unseen Shore.

UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT TO TOWNSMEN'S CAR

RETURNS FROM IRMA TO FIND MRS. McKINNON PASSED AWAY

On Saturday last a truly unfortunate accident happened to the car of Mr. Harry McKinnon, whereby both the doors were torn off the vehicle and other damages incurred. It appears that Mr. McKinnon was returning to his home some twelve miles north of Irma, a lady friend and her little daughter, and when just about at their destination, the car was stalled in the deep snow. Getting out from the car to re-start the engine, he found that the clutch had shifted into reverse gear, with the result that as soon as started, the car made back down the hill and ran into some poplar brush at the side of the road. These obstructions stopped the vehicle, but not before the doors were torn off, and the damage sustained. Adding a truly pathetic feature to the trip, was the fact that upon arriving back at the King farm at Fabryna, where Mr. McKinnon had left his wife for a short visit, he learned of the sudden passing away of Mrs. McKinnon during his absence.

ITEMS OF LOCAL INTEREST

No matter how well organized a newspaper is, it is impossible for its reporters to gather all the local items of interest—some of your acquaintance has taken a trip or returned from one; you have friends or relatives visiting you; a former citizen has returned on a visit—all of these small incidents, and many more are of interest to our readers.

As we wish to make this paper a more live, local newspaper we would greatly appreciate receiving local items from our readers. By informing us of local news, you are doing us an appreciated service, as well as a service to our readers.

FILM BRINGS BACK THE "MYSTERY SHIP"

"THE SEAS BENEATH" SHOWS GREAT DETAIL OPERATIONS OF Q-BOATS

Created during the war as one of the many desperate attempts of the Allied navies to counteract the U-boat menace, "mystery ships" or "Q-ships" as they were also known, are officially credited with sinking eleven of the 200 or so German submarines that succumbed to the Allies. "Mystery ships" varied from big 16,000-ton passenger steamers to little schooners. Each one, however had a heavy armament of naval guns cleverly concealed in false decks and as the war progressed and the U-boats were fitted with larger guns the innocuous-looking "Q-ships" like wise mounted bigger weapons.

England and France share the credit for inventing the "mystery ship" as each set one afloat in November of 1914 shortly after the outbreak of hostilities, and it will come as a surprise to many to learn that the United States had one mystery ship, the U.S.S. "Santee."

The honor of first bringing the mystery ship to the talking screen falls to John Ford, Fox movie director, whose latest offering, "The Seas Beneath" coming Thurs., Fri. and Saturday to the Elkie theatre, deals vividly with America's part in the campaign against the U-boat. In this picture, in which George O'Brien and Marion Leonard play the leading roles, a schooner is equipped with a concealed gun, and in company with an American submarine, stalks a noted German submarine off the Canaries.

Two U.S. underwater craft, the "B-47" and the giant fleet submarine "U-4" were used for the production and naval men saw to it that the technical details to the hunt and battle were authentic.

Mrs. Jack Lewis was on the sick list last week, but is now better.

Sympathies to Bob Durrant. He slipped from a pile of lumber in the yard with the result that he suffered a badly scraped and bruised leg which was the cause of the limp for several days.

ALBERTA GETS MOST GAS TAX REVENUE OF WESTERN PROVINCES

WINNIPEG—All four western provinces now levy a gasoline tax of five cents a gallon and the tax in Ontario and Quebec is the same. Of the western provinces, Alberta derives the largest return from the tax at present, the net revenue during the last fiscal year amounting to $1,981,000. Based on traffic in former years, the British Columbia return from the present tax would yield $1,800,000 but it is thought the return this year, owing to the depression, will fall below that figure.

Saskatchewan's gross return from the tax last year in round figures was $1,000,000, but returns to farmers and others brought the net revenue down to $1,000,000. Manitoba's net return from the tax for the fiscal year ending April 30 last was $1,100,000.

FORMER VETERAN DIES DURING VISIT

MR. W. S. FORD DIES AT BEDSIDE WHILE VISITING BROTHER'S HOME

Mr. William Samuel Ford, who has been visiting his brother Mr. Fred Ford, at Heath, since October, dropped dead at his bedside while dressing on Wednesday morning last. He was in his 64th year.

The deceased who had been suffering from heart trouble and asthma was under the doctor's care, and the doctor who was immediately called stated that heart failure was the cause of death.

The late Mr. Ford was born in Oakville, Ont., and came west in 1891. He had been in the milling business in Manitoba and Saskatchewan for fifteen years and later was a grain buyer there. He served for service in the Great War in 1918, and was a member of the 9th C.M.R. band until demobilization.

The funeral took place on Saturday at the home of Mr. Fred Ford, at Heath, when a large gathering of friends and neighbors paid their respects by attendance, and the service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Wilson, of the Edmonton Anglican church. The body was then taken to Edmonton cemetery for interment, the pallbearers being Messrs. L. Dolphin, T. Withnell, J. Chynoweth, K. Jones, W. Reynolds, and N. McTurk. Mr. Ford's remains, Wainwright, were in charge of the arrangements.

Among the floral tributes were:—The Ford Family, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. R. Jones, wreath; Mr. and Mrs. A. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. B. McLeod, Mr. and Mrs. McTurk and Rose Willow W.I. sprays, and others.

There are left to mourn four brothers and two sisters, these being John H. (Sask.) Albert H. James W., and Fred, and Mrs. E. A. Palmer, of McRorie, Sask., and Mrs. J. Wiggins, of Arrow River, Man. Another brother Charles E. Ford was killed overseas in 1915.

ST THOMAS' CHURCH LADIES HOLD BAZAAR

Over the tables on Saturday last, a very pleasant time was spent by quite a crowd of visitors to the semi-annual bazaar of the Women's Auxiliary of the Anglican church, held in the I.O.O.F. hall, during the afternoon and evening. Stalls aplenty were loaded down with good things and the buying was brisk and profitable. Niceties to eat, and to wear, and for ornamental presents were all on display, and found ready buyers, and the financial returns must have proved gratifying to those responsible.

A large number of the young people of the United church gathered as guests of Rev and Mrs. Huston at the bazaar on Wednesday evening last. A pleasant time was spent in music and games, and a sumptuous supper was served before dispersing.

Mrs. Muriel from Langan, Miss May J., and Mr. W. from Wainwright and Miss Maud McKinnon, from McRorie, were all here at the week end to join their father Mr. H. McKinnon, for the funeral of the late Mrs. McKinnon, wife and mother.

HIGHEST GRADE OF GOVERNMENT SECURITY

MAKING OF 'SUCCESS FOR NEW NATIONAL SERVICE (CANADA) LOAN

It is confidently felt in high financial circles that all the elements required for success attend the current flotation of a loan for $150,000,000 by the Dominion of Canada, through the Department of Finance. That all the money required by the Government to carry on the affairs of the country, without resort to outside markets, will be provided by investors is not questioned. As a sound investment in five and ten year 5 per cent. bonds at attractive prices, is one which investors will be glad to obtain, it is felt that it is only necessary to lay the face before the country and that the rest will be attended to.

Confidence is returning throughout the country after passing through a trying period of two years, during which prices of both commodities and securities sank to abnormally low levels. There is a strong conviction that the decline has run its course and that the tide already started will be running strongly in the other direction before a great while.

Evidence of a turn in the tide of business for the better, with an accompanying return of confidence, are to be found on every hand. There has been an appreciable recovery in the prices of some commodities. That in wheat is of paramount interest to Canada at the present time when there is a heavy outflow to overseas markets. This, and a better distribution of merchandise throughout the country has been indicated in a substantial recovery in the earnings of the country's two great transportation systems. Earnings the first 2 weeks of November indicate that trade and commerce is undergoing improvement, when compared with the grim records for the corresponding periods of the two preceding months. The figures show that the enormous decreases which have been shown for many months past are now dwindling to almost nothing, and unless all signs fail it will be but a short time before the railways will be running well ahead of the tonnage they carried in the past couple of years.

Business people everywhere are in a better frame of mind and looking forward to the resumption of business on a broader scale. Meanwhile the Government must do some financing and it is to the interests of all concerned to see the flotation of this new internal loan result in a great success.

The extent to which this is the case will be a measure of the public's confidence and a successful outcome will be of incalculable benefit to the maintenance of Canada's credit in the eyes of the world, where it has stood pre-eminent for many years.

During the past summer a large Conversion loan was successfully carried out by the Government to take care of maturities, some of which originated in the Great War period. The present loan is entirely different in character, inasmuch as it calls for the running of the affairs of the country. No appeal could be made for this in the markets of the world owing to disturbed international exchange conditions. It is up to Canadians themselves to make good this amount and there is no one of the realm of finance who entertains any doubts about the outcome.

That there is a great reservoir of wealth in Canada only waiting to be tapped by an investment offering the very highest grade of security obtainable, is indicated by banking and trust corporation returns, which shows large sums held in trust for the public. That these will be released in large volume seems unquestionable. The return of confidence is the only thing that could be depended upon to turn on the tap.

Mr. F. Phillips, of Hughenden, was rushed to the hospital on Sunday where he underwent an operation and is now feeling better.

Mr. Joe Clough, who recently met with an accident owing to a runaway team, although still in the hospital is improving rapidly.

Radio fans will be able to hear Mrs. C. C. Church singing over KGB at Long Beach, Calif., during the next two weeks.

The True Canadian

An Original Novel of Canada

An Epic of 2024 A.D.

By Ralph Huntingford

McLeod had taken the blow in silence. His face had taken the color of old parchment and blood trickled down his chin as he had bitten his lips in an effort to control his anger. Was Sir Herbert right? Should he have put Marion first? The chances would have been against his rescuing her, but he could have tried. He would probably have lost his life and nothing been gained. Were the women of other nationalities, who had sacrificed their lives for their countries any better than Canadian women? No! A thousand times no! He had done right. He must help Canada first. He relaxed and turned to Frenchy who had been watching him with awe, (he had never seen his friend look like this before) told him, as near as he could, where he had seen Marion, and that he had better see if he could get a line on where they had taken her to.

Frenchy, wise in the ways of the trail, took up his job by stationing himself outside Ferris's door, with the intention of shadowing anyone who came out of it. McLeod went directly to the Premier's residence and making himself known to the door man, said that he was on state business and demanded to see the Premier at once. He was admitted to an anteroom and after a short wait Bendexter entered. He shook hands with his visitor and said: 'What is this affair of state that is so urgent that it cannot wait till the morning, Mr. McLeod?'

McLeod then told his story and on his experience of Ferris the Premier said: 'Ferris? Jim Ferris. Why man, I have known Ferris for years. I was on my recommendation that he was appointed to Minister of Power. I have always regarded him as a true blue Canadian. It is incredible.'

That I assassinate you and deliver the key of the safe to him.'

'Well, after your experience, with him I cannot doubt your word,' the Premier's face grew grim. 'We will soon bring Mr. Ferris to heel.'

'One minute sir,' McLeod interposed as Bendexter reached for the desk bell. 'Is there no way of saving Miss Newton? Although I felt it my duty to acquaint you with the facts first I cannot forget that in doing so I have endangered her life, possibly sacrificed it.'

'We must save her if possible. Have you any plan? But what's the matter man, are you hurt, or sick,' as McLeod recoiled.

'Merely nerves, I think. I have been under a considerable strain lately.' The Premier got him a glass of brandy and made him drink it.

'You asked if I had a plan. Yes, I have, but I shall need help.' 'You have the whole resources of Canada behind you. What is the plan?'

McLeod then outlined his idea for capturing Ferris. The Premier listened intently, nodding his head at intervals. 'It should work,' he said at length, 'but we won't take any chances.' He went to a massive wall safe and opening the huge door stepped inside the vault, beckoning McLeod to follow him.

Inside, he pointed to a small iron box. 'That is what Ferris is after,' the papers he wants are in that box.' He opened the box with a key that he took from his pocket. Removing some papers he carefully looked the box again and they left the vault. 'I shall place these in a safer place or tonight,' he said, as he closed the vault door. 'Here (offering McLeod the key) is the key. How soon do you want to murder me?' (with a smile).

The sooner the better,' McLeod answered.

Bendexter got an automatic and handed to him, saying, 'Make it realistic.'

McLeod took up the gun and pointing it at the carpet fired four shots in rapid succession, then tore out of the house, brushing aside the astonished doorman and disappeared into the early dawn. Policemen appeared magically and ran into the reception room, the butler and secretary were already there, holding back a crowd of frightened servants. Ronald Bendexter lay on the floor, his body in what seemed to be a pool of blood. A doctor was hastily summoned and on his arrival the room was cleared of every one but the police. The moment they were alone the Premier set up.

This affair must be broadcasted throughout Ottawa at once and nowhere else. I am not injured at all. It is only part of a trap. Doctor, you will see to it that I am fixed up so that I look desperately wounded and admit no one but James Ferris, if he should happen to come to see me. Corporal, (to the policeman in charge) you will see that Ferris hears of this at once. Indirectly you will then bring a squad of men here and hide near that safe. You had better carry me to my room now.'

The Premier was lifted up and under the direction of the doctor was carefully carried upstairs. The servants stood aside and looked at him compassionately as he passed. He was well liked by all.

Within an hour of the time McLeod had left the Premier, he was entering the presence of Ferris. He threw the key down on the table saying, 'There you are, I have done it.'

'You have done well, but you should have killed him.'

'I am no murderer but I did my best. You will release Miss Newton now?' asked McLeod.

'Not for a few hours yet but you shall go to her, here is the address,' he gave McLeod a piece of paper. 'As soon as I have got the papers that I require you shall both be free.' A baleful look came into his eyes as he said this.

McLeod did not see the look but took the paper and left the room. He did not know where the place was but determined to get Frenchy and try to rescue Marion. As he passed from the hotel he kept a lookout for his halfbreed friend but could not see him. He decided that he was on the trail of Marion. Well, he would soon be with her himself. He had been very lucky so far, if his hawk would only hold out till the finish. He was about to signal a car when a heavy hand was placed on his shoulder. Turning quickly, he saw that he had been stopped by a policeman.

'I arrest you, Armand McLeod,' the policeman said, 'for the murder of Premier Bendexter. You had better come quietly.'

'Arrest me? for murder? It's all a mistake. The Premier is alive. Take me to him. There has been a slip somewhere.'

'Yes, you're the one that slipped. The door man recognised you as you ran out of the house. Come on now.'

Protesting violently McLeod was led away. The constable took no chances and put a pair of handcuffs on him. He was taken to the nearest sub-station and hauled before the sergeant in charge.

'Who have you got there Peters?' 'The man who shot the Premier, Sergeant.'

'So What's your name?' said the sergeant.

'My name is Armand McLeod, and this is all a hideous mistake. I did not shoot the Premier. You must let me go there is a girl's life at stake. Miss Newton, Get the Premier on the phone or Sir Herbert they can identify me.'

'Yeah! How about the President of the United States and the King of England as well. What evidence is there against him Peters?'

'Description by the man he knocked down when he left the house. He knew him.'

'That's good enough. Put him in Number six till the morning court.' McLeod, raving like a madman was dragged away to his cell. Sir Herbert was sitting in his room disconsolate. All his efforts to locate Marion had failed. The police had been of no help. They had nothing to go on and they told him that it would take time to find clues. With all his money and influence he could not find his own girl. Ferris was being searched for but had disappeared. He passed his hand over his brow, he was head with sleep but dare not surrender to it until Marion was found.

What was that? Someone was giggling along the corridor. A knock at the door and Frenchy half fell into the room. He was at the point of exhaustion. The bandage round his head was red with blood where he had broken open one of his wounds. 'Whiskey! M'sieu, tout sauté,' and as Sir Herbert hurried for the decanter, he continued, 'Frenchy he fin' M'sieu Marion, Sir Herbert get police, quick, no can fin' M'sieu

McLeod. No time loss. Go 27 Bostock street, downstairs.'

At the halfbreed's words, Sir Herbert galvanised into action. 'Where did you say Frenchy? Brace up man, where's my girl?'

'No. 27 Bostock street.' Frenchy collapsed at Sir Herbert's feet. Hurriedly lifting Frenchy to the couch Marions' father rang for an attendant and then went downstairs for the police. In a few minutes he was on his way to Marions' rescue, with a strong bodyguard.

After McLeod had left him, Ferris dressed himself for the street and leaving the hotel drove to the Premier's residence. A policeman was on guard at the door but allowed him to pass when he gave his name. A foot man in the hall asked him his business.

'I have just heard of the Premier's attempted murder. Can I see him.'

'I don't think so sir, not for half an hour at least. The doctor is still with him. All the servants but me have been sent away. There must be no noise, sir, you understand? Mr. Bendexter is in a very serious condition. Would you care to wait in the library until the doctor comes down. Possibly he will let me see the Premier. Possibly he will let you see the Premier, if it is important.'

'I think I will write to him if I may use the library, undisturbed. You can then give him the letter when he is better. It will not excite him so much. Can I do so here without being bothered.'

'Indeed yes, sir. No one will bother you here.'

'Thank you,' Ferris watched the man leave the room and close the door. Waiting for a few moments to make sure that the man had gone, he moved with silent, strides to the vault door. Taking out a small notebook he glanced at the combination written in it. It had taken him months to get hold of it. Carefully he turned the dial, 7963 left, 4329 right, 2985 left, the tumblers fell into their places and the huge door swung open. As Ferris passed into the vault a chuckle of satisfaction escaped him. Going to the small safe, he knelt down before it and produced the key that Bendexter had given McLeod. As he was in the act of inserting it in the keyhole a voice behind him shattered his hopes of world power.

'So, Mr. Ferris, you have turned burglar as well as traitor. I did not think McLeod's trap would work so well.'

Springing to his feet Ferris turned to see the figure of the Premier in the doorway, backed by a squad of police. He glanced round wildly any then said, 'You win, Bendexter. My luck has deserted me ever since that damned McLeod crossed my path. He held out his wrists for the handcuffs. 'Anyway, he won't live to enjoy his triumph.'

'What do you mean, won't live?' 'I sent him to his death an hour ago. Both he and the girl are dead by now.' He laughed wildly as they led him away.

Bendexter turned to the radio-telephone and connected with the Ottawa hotel where he asked for McLeod. He was told that McLeod had been arrested and taken to the police station.

'Arrested? What fool did that?' He at once got the police station on the radiophone. 'Have you got Armand McLeod there?' he almost yelled. 'This is Ronald Bendexter.'

The Cabinet of Ling Fu

The eyes of Ling Fu were like the eyes of the Buddha on the table before him, cold and expressionless.

"My dear young lady," he said, "I am almost too perfect English. I can not conceive why you should leave the safety of your settlement and venture into the heart of this ancient city on such a futile errand."

The girl seated at the other side of the table watched him with a brown puckering her smooth brow. Every one in Shanghai knew Ling

Fu—or one side of him. The man was immensely wealthy, owning many wharves and go-downs on the Huang Ho. He was a familiar figure in the International Settlement, on the bund and the race course. But in spite of his wealth and his daily intercourse with Europeans, Ling Fu preserved all the outward signs of the Oriental. His big rambling house was tucked away in the bustling streets of the Chinese city of Shanghai. He was never seen in anything but Chinese costume.

And the girl was beginning to realize that his mind worked on Oriental lines. She had seen him often enough before, tall and powerful with a broad placid face that gave no hint of his thoughts. Not until today had she guessed that anything more than merchandise and bills of lading might interest the brain behind those calm, expressionless features.

"I've told you why I've come," she said shortly.

"Yes," agreed Ling Fu. "The home on my ancestors is honored."

The room in which they sat was a curious mixture of East and West. A thick blue carpet of conventional British pattern covered most of the teak wood floor. The walls were hung with blue silk. Large Chinese vases seemed to clash with chairs and tables of European manufacture. In one corner, joss sticks were burning. At the end of the room, in an alcove stood a huge red lacquered cabinet—iron-bound, with startling yellow decoration.

A strange room this, in which Ling Fu interviewed his numerous visitors a room in which East and West could meet. The girl with her hair, whirling hair and smartly cut yellow gown, looked no more out of place than the man in his flowered Chinese robe and mandarin's hat. Whether the rest of Ling Fu's house was furnished in the same peculiar style no European in Shanghai could say.

"You took dangerous risks in coming here," went on Ling Fu smoothly. "If I may be forgiven for saying so, it was foolish."

"I wore a cloak," protested the girl. "No one took any notice of me. My servants shall escort you back to my house again." The Chinese man's long-mailed fingers stretched toward a ring.

The girl sprang to her feet.

"I shan't go," she cried angrily. "I'll have the truth."

"The truth?" Ling Fu's hand slid back into his capacious sleeves. "Who but our immortal ancestors knows the truth?"

"Oh, don't try to put me off by talking like that! I want to know why my father does everything you tell him to do."

Mr. Chester honors me with his friendship. "You have some kind of a hold on him."

"My dear young lady, impetuosity too frequently drives out wisdom," Eileen Chester bit her lips with vexation. She realized that she could not move this impassive sphinx. She was beaten. And she had hoped for so much from that interview.

She glanced wistfully round the room. It was possible that the information she sought lay hidden close at hand, perhaps in one of the drawers. If only she could have a few minutes alone here! But she knew that Ling Fu was far too wily to allow that.

She had asked in her errand. It had been foolish to come. It was too much to expect that she could outwit Ling Fu.

"All right," she said. "I'll go. But I'll tell you this, Ling Fu; if anything happens—"

The Chinaman held up a plump white hand.

"Words unspoken never bring repentance," he interrupted silkily. "Ling Fu bears an honorable name in Shanghai. Why should harm come to Mr. Chester through him?"

He rose slowly to his feet, and stood watching the girl through half closed lids.

"Perhaps you will carry a message to your steamed father?" he murmured.

The girl nodded sullenly. "Tell him to give the papers I sent with you to the British consul, but on no account to reveal from where they came. Thus much trouble will be avoided."

Without waiting for a reply, Ling Fu moved slowly toward the red-and-yellow cabinet at the end of the room. Drawing a key from the voluminous folds of his robe, he unlocked the double doors and opened one of them. Then he stooped to each something from inside.

Sudden, wild temptation came to Eileen Chester. Here was an opportunity of which she might take advantage. The key of the cabinet was still in the lock. One vigorous push and she could lock Ling Fu inside. A few minutes would suffice to search the room. If she didn't find what she wanted—well, things would be no worse.

Acting hurriedly on the impulse, she carried out her plan. The door slammed to, imprisoning the Chinaman. With true Oriental passivity, he neither cried nor attempted to break open the door. No sound came from the cabinet when Eileen withdrew the key.

She threw it on a near-by table and stood for a moment trying to calm her excitement. There was no need to hurry. She knew that none of Ling Fu's servants would enter into the room until the gong was struck. Her chance of finding what she sought was slender. But it was her only chance, and even when the first thrill of excitement had passed, she did not regret her action.

Starting at the other end of the room she commenced her search. Many of the drawers contained papers but she could make nothing of them. Though she could speak Chinese fairly well, the queer written characters were beyond her. It was heart-rending to think that any one of these documents might contain the information that she wanted.

Still, she must persevere. She worked her way down the room and was eagerly turning over the papers lid the small table nearest the cabinet when a stealthy sound behind her made her swing round sharply.

For a moment her heart stood still. It was as she thought. The sound had not come from the interior of the cabinet but from the side of it. And lurking in the shadow, pressed close to the cabinet for shelter, was the figure of a man.

One of Ling Fu's servants? Watching her every movement? Eileen's heart raced furiously again as she wondered what to do. Then she decided that boldness was the best policy.

"Well?" she cried. "What are you doing there?"

There was a tense silence, the figure did not move.

"Come out!" said Eileen. "It's no use hiding there."

After a slight pause, a hand slid round the corner of the cabinet—the hand of a white man. The arm that followed it bore the stripes of a lieutenant in the royal navy. To the girl intense surprise a young man in uniform stepped out of the shadow.

"I always was a clumsy devil," he remarked, a wide grin on his freckled face. "Well, little Miss Burglar, how's business?"

Eileen was too astonished to speak. She stood clutching a document she had just taken from the drawer, staring at the newcomer in silence.

"If I'd known that burglars might be so charming," he went on easily, "I think I'd have joined their union."

"Don't be absurd!" snapped Eileen, finding her tongue at last. "I'm not a burglar!"

"Then I must apologize. I really thought as I watched you turning out those drawers—"A harder role appeared in the young man's voice. "You don't live here?"

"No. This is Ling Fu's house."

"And where is Ling Fu?"

"I—I looked him in the cabinet."

"Splendid!" The freckled face broke into a grin again. "What's the big idea?"

Eileen stiffened. What right had this man to question her?

"Perhaps you'll tell me what you are doing here?" she asked with dignity. "Hiding in dark corners and—she broke off catching sight of his right hand. "What's that?"

"Blood!" he said slowly. "Now where the deuce—"

He turned and stared at the cabinet. One stride brought him close to it. Through the crack of the door, near the hinge, oozed a trickle of red.

"Quick!" he cried. "The key! Where is it?"

Eileen snatched up the key and gave it to him. As soon as he turned the lock, the door of the cabinet flew open. The body of a man slid limply out and dropped to the floor at their feet.

The face of Ling Fu was as a man lies in death in his life. But the crimson-stained knife between his lips spoke only too eloquently.

"For a few horrid moments, Eileen Chester stared at the unopened door in silence. Then she was aware that the lieutenant was watching her closely. There was no amusement now on his freckled face, but stern hardness.

"So you—looked him—in the cabinet!" he said slowly.

Sudden realization of the situation flashed upon the girl. The speech was an accusation!

"He—he was all right then," she stammered. "It—it's not three minutes ago. You must know that if you were hiding there."

"I hadn't arrived then. Tell me what happened?"

There was an authority in the voice that brooked no denial. Eileen obeyed.

"And what were you doing here? What were you searching for?"

"Oh, I can't tell you that!" The reply was almost hysterical. "Anything but that!"

The young man stooped to examine the body of Ling Fu. Then he straightened himself and caught Eileen's

How Many Sales Transactions Do You Need?

An Advertisement addressed to our Local Retailers

IT IS POSSIBLE FOR A RETAILER TO CALCULATE THE NUMBER OF SALES TRANSACTIONS REQUIRED BY HIS BUSINESS EACH DAY, WEEK, MONTH, YEAR. HERE'S HOW THE CALCULATION CAN BE MADE:

1. Sum up the estimated operating expenses for the year — the amounts required for rent, wages, delivery, supplies of various sorts, insurance, repairs, losses. Add, also, the net profit which one should have to reward his capital and enterprise.
2. Divide this total by the number of working days in the year — say 305, in order to get the average daily cost of operating one's business.
3. Ascertain the amount of the average sales transactions. (The daily records of individual sales, over a period of a month or so, will enable one to make his calculation.)
4. Reckon the amount of gross profit earned on an average sales transaction—20—25—30 per cent.
5. Divide the total average daily expenses by the profit on an average sales transaction.

Thus one gets the number of sales transactions required daily to recover the costs of doing business.

ILLUSTRATION

SUPPOSE THAT YOU FIND THAT YOUR ANNUAL EXPENSES, INCLUDING A DESIRE, NET PROFIT, TOTAL $4,000, OR, SAY, $13.11

Issued by the Canadian Weekly Newspapers Assoc

PER DAY, THAT YOUR AVERAGE SALES TRANSACTION IS 56 CENTS, ON WHICH THE AVERAGE GROSS PROFIT, AT 25 PER CENT WOULD BE 14 CENTS. THEN YOUR REQUIRED NUMBER OF SALES TRANSACTIONS PER DAY WOULD BE $13.11 DIVIDED BY 14; OR 94.

NOW, TO ASSURE AN AVERAGE OF 94 SALES TRANSACTIONS PER DAY, RAIN OR SHINE, WILL REQUIRE YOU TO BE EXTRAORDINARILY DILIGENT IN THE MATTER OF ATTRACTING CUSTOMERS. YOUR WINDOWS SHOULD BE MADE ALLURING. YOUR SERVICE SHOULD BE COURTEOUS, PROMPT AND PLEASING, SO AS TO MAKE CUSTOMERS WILLING "REPEATERS." YOUR RANGE OF MERCHANDISE SHOULD BE GOOD, AND YOUR PRICES SHOULD BE COMPETITIVE.

BUT THESE ALONE WON'T SUFFICE TO ASSURE 94 SALES TRANSACTIONS EVERY DAY, ON AN AVERAGE. YOU'LL HAVE TO DO A WHOLE LOT OF INVITING. WEEK BY WEEK YOUR INVITATIONS TO BUYERS OUGHT TO BE PUBLISHED IN THIS NEWSPAPER.

If you fail to issue cordial invitations, week by week then your business is in a state of peril.

N.B.

The accompanying illustrative example makes it clear that a retailer can check up his progress daily. Without a daily measuring of achievement against requirement no business management can be called safe.

CAN YOU MAKE

TENDER FLAKY PASTRY

Pie and pastry are frowned upon by many food specialists. One reason for this is that pie is not used wisely. A rich dessert like pie should not be served at the end of a heavy meal. Pie should not figure very largely in the diet of sedentary people as their activity is not sufficiently great. Pastry should be avoided in the diet of children. Despite all these restrictions, pastry can be used provided that it is used in wise combinations by people who are doing active work.

Tender flaky pastry is more easily digested than soggy pastry. There is no question as to which is most pleasing. Practice is required to make flaky pastry but there are a few simple rules which will help the pie maker.

Temperature is one of the most important points. The ingredients should be chilled. The sudden change of temperature into the hot oven causes the pastry to expand and the water to change into steam. This is what makes the pastry tender and flaky. There is no leavening agent added as in the making of cakes.

Too moist a dough is one of the most common causes of pie failure. The usual proportion is one quarter cup of fat and one-quarter cup water to one cup flour.

The flakiness of pastry is increased by proper manipulation. Work in the fat so that the fat and the flour will form layers. Try to work in as much air as possible. The fat may be worked in with the finger tips. This is a quicker method than cutting it in with a knife but has the disadvantage of warming up the ingredients with the heat of the hands.

In making puff pastry, butter is used as the fat. The salt is washed out of the butter first. The pastry is kept at a very low temperature.

Many people find that they get better pastry by working in only one half the fat and dotting the remainder over the pastry and rolling it in. Roll out the pastry and dot with a part of the fat. Fold over so that a layer of air is enclosed. Press the edges together. Repeat this several times and this alternate dotting and rolling increases the layers of air.

In making apple pie, the apples may be cooked into apple sauce and then baked in the raw crust. A better oven can be used for this, because the apples are already cooked. There is frequently trouble with the undercrust of an apple pie being soggy. A strong underheat in the oven helps to overcome this. Many dried apple pies are made without an undercrust. Mix a little flour with the sugar sprinkled over the apples. This helps to absorb the surplus juice.

PLAIN PASTRY

1 cup flour
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1/4 cup fat
 Cold water (about 1/4 cup)
 Sift the flour and salt. Cut in the shortening. Add the cold water and roll.

APPLE PIE

4 or 5 apples
 1/3 cup sugar
 1 teaspoon butter
 spice

Line pie plate with paste. Peel and cut the apples into very thin slices. Sprinkle with the sugar and spice and dot with butter. Moisten the edges of the undercrust. Cover with the upper crust which has had some cuts made in it. Press edges together. Bake 40 to 45 minutes in a moderate oven.

WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA DECEMBER 2nd., 1931

AND IT'S THE SAME
IN WAINWRIGHT

At possibly no time in recent years has the good old motto "Where there's a will there's a way" been better exemplified than it has by farmers and townspeople alike during the period of depression from which we are beginning to emerge.
Plenty of good, strong unadulterated will power has been necessary for a good many of our citizens to keep their heads up, and keep a smile on during the trying times, through which we have been passing, and from which the escape seemed so remote. Strong, honorable will-power, is one of the prime essentials in all who are to do things worth while.

But, unfortunately, there is another kind of will-power or probably we should call it won't-power, which cannot be so highly recommended, and which, sad to relate, is ever want to make its appearance in most of our social, political and business organizations.

Everyone has seen the man, or woman, who must be crosswise, or who must criticize and kick, or who cannot hold their temper in check.
Almost any organization can point out one of its members who seems to feel it a duty to make themselves busy undoing what others are trying so hard to do. Or who feels sighted because they have not got that place of honor. Or who will not operate because they cannot have things their own way.

They make life unpleasant for themselves—they waste their talents —and they certainly do not make things any sweeter for the other fellow.

The old saying which goes "Every dog has his day" might well be extended to say that "no dog has every day." We must expect, to have to concede to the will of the other fellow just as much as we expect him to concede to ours. If the other fellow has other views, we must remember that he has as much right to his own thoughts as we have to ours. And if he likes us we should hold our temper at least as far as possible—for it takes two to make trouble, and in all probability he believes what he is saying. If he doesn't he will be more ashamed if we treat him like a man.

We must realize that we have something to do toward the good of our organization, or our community —and that our efforts must be creative and not destructive. If we honestly believe this — and religiously carry it out—there need be no fear but that we will use our will-power and not our won't-power.—Ex.

STRANGE
BUT TRUE!

It is strange that America, the land of prohibition, should find it necessary to pursue an intensive campaign for the purpose of detecting motorists who have looked upon the hooch when it was red.

Yet it is the truth and a vague idea of the thoroughness with which the police are tackling the matter can be gauged from the fact that a doctor has invented an apparatus which detects an alcoholic "breath" even if it is disguised in cloves, coffee, peppermint, or any other of the time-honored aids calculated to defy discovery.

The apparatus is portable and immediately he suspects a driver of having had one over the eight, the cop merely asks the suspect to blow up a toy balloon. The balloon is then ripped on a pipe attached to a container filled with a pink liquid. If the suspect's breath is pure and un-defiled, nothing happens. If there is the slightest trace of alcohol, the pink solution turns white.

Should the suspect refuse to undergo the test, the cop has merely to hold a small suction tube to the victim's nose and the result is the same.

Reader, when you are preparing to come to town to do some trading just pick up your home town paper, glance at the advertising columns and see who wants the trade. The man who advertises certainly has inducements to offer you or he wouldn't ask you to call and see him before buying.

HOW MY WORLD WAGS

'Never write what you dare not sign,' says the Milverton (Ont.) Sun.
No, indeed, or signin' may follow.
Sea shells were found in a shaft when drilling for gas near Kelowna relates the News, of Vernon, B.C.
Sounds like a shell fish story.

The Porcupine Advance Ont. pulishes 250 words in praise of the weather. But in this connection, we have never found flattery of any avail.

The Echo, Amherstburg Ont. tells of a local farmer who grew corn from kernels taken from an Egyptian tomb. Truly, a maize-ling.

The day after the shooting season closed, says the Eastern Chronicle, at New Glasgow, N.S., a townsman saw some beautiful ruffed grouse on his lawn enough to make him grouse and feel ruffled.

Many mining claims at Island Lake which contains 1,000 islands are being recorded at Winnipeg. The pro-motors will soon be serving that dainty known as floating island.

The Standard-Observer, Pembroke
Ont. thinks that the Republicans can get ready to pack next year after the Presidential election. Yes, and quietly walk out, unless Cal chooses to run.

Making It Go

It was a 1912 model, bought long ago at the local Canadian show. The man who owned it was without pride in its possession. Yet he seemed filled with a strange determination to make it go.

He had struggled with it for two hours. His hands and face were black and his back ached. He probed its innards despairingly. Of skill he seemed destitute, yet in wishfulness to succeed he seemed richly endowed.

Suddenly a mania apparently took hold of him.
He grabbed an axe, rushed up into the attic and brought down the old wicker basket that had cradled all the children. He smashed it up and stuffed it inside the infernal thing. As he touched a match to it a sudden crackling noise was heard, and flame belched forth.

'Hurray!' he yelled, 'I've got the furnace going at last.'

The Untruthful Lover
My bonnie lies over the ocean,
I lie to her over the sea,
And birds of a feather,
They should flock together,
So bring back my bonnie to me.

Private Help for Parents
No doubt you have often been embarrassed, if you are a parent, by your little boy coming to you for aid with his arithmetic.

You try to switch the subject by vague references to an icecream conor, even a trip to the movies, but little Waldemar flatly refuses to be diverted.

Somehow, arithmetic seems to bring out the worst in a child.
We purpose offering a little help from time to time for harrassed parents.

Take the question of fractions. You may remember that there are proper fractions and improper or vulgar fractions.

It is best to write a sharp note to the teacher if she gives Waldemar any of the vulgar fractions to solve.
There is too little refinement in the world as it is.

Very well, then.
First, remember we cannot add two different things, like horses and cows, until we reduce them to a common denominator such as round steak.

The steak may be divided into small fractions and the quotient is then termed hamburger.

The units of the Hamburger can be added up into multiples and linked together with 75 per cent sawdust which equals 100 per cent Pork Sausages.

The Least Common Multiple is termed a Weenie, or a Weiner.
And the Greatest Common Pleasure is termed Handing out Bologney.

Father's Old Sweet Songs
There are no songs that seem to me
As sweet as Mother used to sing, Except those tender strains with which

Dear Father made the welkin ring
Those touching little lullabies,
Like 'Old MacDonald Had a Farm'
Oh, sing them once again to me
They never did me any harm.
How oft, I cried at 'Jingle Bells'
And sobbed at 'There Are Smiles'
When Father yelled them mournfully
Though off key some several miles
He used to sing of Clementine,
And no one drew a gun,
O memory, bring back the days
Of dear old nineteen-thirty-one!

REDUCED RAIL FARES FOR YULETIDE SEASON

A glorious Christmas with loved ones by the family fireside, will be placed within closer reach of all Canadians this year through the medium of reduced round-trip fares for Christmas and New Years, which have been announced by Canadian National Railways. Special privileges are being extended to non-resident school teachers and students, whereby they may enjoy the low fares during the term of their official holidays. These fares are offered at the rate of one and one-quarter times the regular single fare. Similar concessions are offered the general public over the Christmas and New Years holidays although the period during which the tickets may be use in these cases is more limited. For Westerners who intend to spend the Yuletide season with friends or relatives in Eastern Canada or overseas special privileges are also afforded and these tickets are good for three to five months.

IS THIS WHY SOME OF US ARE NOT IN JAIL

Perhaps you would laugh at the idea that owning a dog or cat or a canary might keep you from going to jail. It does seem rather far fetched, doesn't it?

Yet there are close to 10,000,000 dogs in the United States, besides great numbers of cats and birds and other pets—enough so that every boy and girl can have at least one. But of the men who today are serving sentences in prison, less than one in every hundred had a pet when he was a boy.

Can it be possible that owning a pet does something to a boy or girl, so that he or she is less likely to become a law-breaker? It is quite possible. Having a pet teaches you kindness. A dog can give you as good lessons in loyalty, courage and cheerfulness as the best teacher in the world. And these are the qualities that make good citizens.

Maybe that old dog of yours, whom you prize so much as a playmate is more valuable than you dreamed.
Perhaps he is an important character. At any rate, he is worth the best treatment that you can give him.

BELGIAN KIDDIES DECIDE

SANTA CLAUS IS NO MYTH

An excited pair of youngsters from Belgium arrived in the city west over Canadian National Railways recently and decided that there may be some truth in this Santa Claus story after all. After traveling by themselves all the way from Brussels, the two young Belgian, Maurice Bevelde, aged 5, and Cyrille Devalder 8, descended from the "Continental Limited" to find a country covered with a deep blanket of snow—more snow than they imag-

CHILDREN CRY FOR IT—

CHILDREN hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and just as harmless as the recipe reads.

When Baby's cry warns of colic,
a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea.
When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, you should use it to keep the system from clogging.

Castoria is sold in every drugstore;
the genuine always bears Chas. H.
Fletcher's signature.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

Edson R. Waite,

As solace to the young men who, were it not for the vigilance of the police, would turn our roads into speedways, why should they not try the sport of gliding? This form of recreation offers a much better manner of breaking one's neck than is to be met in an automobile crash. It is preferable too, as in nine cases out of ten harm comes only to the intrepid birdman himself.

Joking aside, gliding costs little, provides thrills, and teaches one the use of the air as no engine borne plane could.

Incidentally, this cool morning has given us a desire to hit somebody, preferably someone who is handcuf-ed and it occurs that the fellow we would like to have in that shape is the man responsible for the slump, but it would be a hard thing to locate him.

Perhaps we might begin with the bankers, and doubtless they would refer us to their depositories. The de-positors would point to their creditors, and the creditors might well lay the blame on their creditors.

Eventually it might be discovered we ourselves are responsible.

We also might find that if all our business concerns increased their newspaper advertising we might be induced through that advertising to

Edited by

GRANT FLEMING, M.D. — ASSOCIATE SECRETARY

BOILS

In general, we think of germs as causing indefinite diseases, such as diphtheria or typhoid fever. There are, however, other germs which are almost always present on, or in the skin. These seldom cause trouble, if the skin is unbroken and if the individual's general health is maintained.

The unbroken healthy skin has several functions, among which is that of serving as a covering for the body, in which capacity it acts as a barrier to keep out germs which would cause trouble if they succeeded in penetrating the barrier and reaching the structures underneath.

The skin may be broken in many ways, as, for example, when it is cut or scratched. Many small breaks occur which are not visible to the naked eye, but which nevertheless are large as compared with the germs which may gain entrance to the body through them.

The skin, as one organ of the body reflects the general condition of the body. The skin cannot be healthy unless the whole body is healthy. Some diseases, such as diabetes, particularly influence the health of the skin, and when these diseases occur, the power of the skin to resist germs is lessened. Uncleanliness and over-clothing which causes excessive perspiration and so irritates the skin, also lowers its resistance.

A faulty diet, the use of greasy foods, upsets of the digestive tract and constipation are favourable to the germs. It would appear that these conditions and others, such as worry, over-fatigue and lack of fresh air, reduce the general resistance of the body to the assaults of germs.

When germs gain a foothold for one or other of the reasons mentioned, they set up an inflammation which shows itself as redness and swelling, and which is felt as pain. This inflammation may and usually does go on to the formation of pus, and so these germs are known as pus-producing germs.

Boils are infections in that they are caused by living germs which may be spread to other parts of the body or to other persons. This is the reason why, in treating boils, strict cleanliness is necessary. Considerable harm may follow the squeezing of boils as this is apt to break down the barrier formed and spread the infection. The boil should not be touched with the hand. A carbuncle is really a large, deep-seated boil and it is, therefore, more painful and serious than the ordinary boil.

The prevention of boils lies in giving attention to general health through proper food, regular climatisation, fresh air and exercise, by keeping the skin whole, clean and healthy, by avoiding over-clothing of the body, and by regular bathing.

Proper treatment includes the same attention to general health, and treatment of the boil by a physician who may also use vaccines to ease the resistance of the sufferer. Proper treatment limits the spread of infection and avoids possible dangers.

Questions concerning Health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 184 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

(BY BETTY BARCLAY)

ECONOMICAL DAINTIES

Who said bread and prunes were humble foods? They may be in some cases, but either may well form the base of a dish that is fit for a king. Try the following and see how pleasing they are:

Cocoanut Bread Pudding

1/2 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
2 eggs, slightly beaten
2 cups milk, scalded
1/4 cup shredded cocoanut
2 tablespoons butter, melted
1/2 teaspoon vanilla, or 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup stale bread, cut into 1/2-inch cubes

Combine sugar, salt, and eggs. Add milk gradually then cocoanut, butter and vanilla or nutmeg. Place bread in greased baking dish. Pour milk and egg mixture over it. Place dish in pan of hot water and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 45 to 50 minutes, or until pudding is firm. Chill. Serves 6.

Prune Souffle

2/3 cup sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
4 egg whites, stiffly beaten
1 can cocoanut, southern style
1 cup cooked prunes, seeded & finely chopped

Fold sugar and salt gradually into egg whites; then fold in cocoanut and prunes. Turn in to greased baking dish. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) 45 minutes or until firm in center. Serve hot, serves 8.

Lemon Pudding

1 cup milk
1 cup coffee cream
12 drops junket brand lemon (yellow food color)
3 tablespoons sugar
1 junket tablet
1 tablespoon cold water
1/2 teaspoon lemon flavoring

Dissolve the junket tablet in cold water. Warm milk cream and sugar to lukewarm (110 degrees F.) NOT HOT, stirring constantly. Add the flavoring and the food color, then the dissolved junket and pour at once into individual dishes. Let stand undisturbed until firm—about 10 minutes. Chill and serve.

Plantation Marble Cake

(2 eggs)
2 cups special cake flour, sifted

2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1/4 cup milk
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon each cloves and nutmeg

Sift flour once, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs then flour alternately with milk, a small amount at each time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Divide batter in two parts. To one part, add spices and molasses. Place light and dark mixtures alternately, a teaspoon at a time, in greased pan. 8x8x2 inches. Bake in moderate oven 50 minutes or until done. Frost with boiled frosting. Decorate with raisins and halves of walnut meats.

Bran Muffins

1 cup special cake flour sifted
4 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 egg, well beaten
2 tablespoons sugar
1/4 cup milk
3 tablespoons butter, melted
1 cup bran flakes

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Combine egg and sugar and flour alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add butter and bran flakes. Pour into greased muffin pans filling them 2/3 full. Bake in hot oven 25 minutes. Makes 12 medium-sized muffins.

Spiced Cranberry Jelly

4 cups cranberries
2 cups sugar
3 cups water
12 whole cloves
2 inch stick cinnamon
4 allspice berries

Pick over and wash the berries. Put in a saucepan with the water and spices. Cook until berries are soft. Put through a strainer. Heat. Add sugar. Finish as cranberry jelly.

ROGER BABSON SAYS

"TIME TO ADVERTISE"

If there ever was a time when the newspapers could perform a real service, it is today; furthermore this applies to all groups of people, bankers, manufacturers, merchants and wage earners. You need only to tell the people the simple truth. Statistics now indicate that business has seen its worst, even though the recovery will be slow.

Irrespective of what happens to the stock market in the next year, I am willing to stake my reputation based on 30 years experience (1) that business has been its worst; (2) that although the change will be slow it will be in the right direction, (3) that with in a reasonable time this country will enter a period of marked prosperity. In short, statistics today point to another period of prosperity the same as they three years ago pointed to the present depression—as you go back home tell your merchants now is the time to advertise.—Roger Babson, business economist to members of Advertising Federation of America.

Here's the best news ever heralded for some time. Two Calgary men have made wonderful discovery. They have discovered a process by which leather can be made into plastic form—leather in form that can be applied as easily as butter is applied to bread, and yet, after it sets it has all the wearing qualities, the flexibility, the toughness and tenacity of solid leather from which it is made. No tacks or thread are needed if you can spread butter on bread, you can use it—a child can do it.

The inventors have named their discovery "COMPO LEATHER!" Compo Leather will double and triple the life of your shoes, rubbers and overcoats. It will rebuild discarded shoes and put them into use again. It will add many lives to your moccasins, shoe packs, gloves, mitts and make them waterproof and wearproof. It will rebuild belts, automobile tops, tires, etc. Its use will save you more than a hundred dollars per year.

Compo Leather is an all-Canadian product, manufactured in the province of Alberta. It is fully guaranteed—it must give you satisfaction or your money will be refunded. We have some fine openings for agents and canvassers.

The post office lawn is being scarred again by bygones across it from all angles. Some people have the idea that when the snow comes a path does not harm the grass. This is not the case. A winter path will scar and damage the grass. Citizens should make every effort to prevent crossings of the post office lawns. There is good sidewalk all round and no need of these fresh paths. The teachers could help in the education of their pupils on the care of the grass plots.

with our lives. It'll make things easier if I know exactly what is going on here.

"I can't tell you," repeated the girl. "It would ruin my father."

"Who is your father?"

"James Chester."

"Chester & Lobb?"

"Yes."

Sidney Halliday's face cleared.

"Never mind then," he said. "Perhaps I can guess near enough. Now we mustn't waste any time. Every minute is precious. There's no one else in the cabinet. How the deuce Ling Fu met his death beats me. But we can't worry about that now. We must get away before his death is discovered. Come along! We'll try the way I got in."

He led the way behind the cabinet. In the alcove, there were several feet of space between the cabinet and the wall. He lifted the silken hangings to disclose a small door. When he tried the handle of the door, his face grew solemn.

"It's locked!" he muttered. "Some one knows what has happened! And that some one is the murderer of Ling Fu."

The went back again to the front of the cabinet. Eileen Chester followed the young man without question. She had no idea why he was here but somehow she never thought of disputing his leadership.

"Do you really think," she asked "that some one has been in the room and—"

"Some one has locked that door since I passed through it," he replied. "I must have entered the room immediately after you locked Ling Fu in the cabinet. It seems pretty obvious to me that the murderer was in the room then. Somehow or other, he managed to escape through the small door, locking it after him."

The True Canadian

"You sir," came the answer. "He was arrested for your murder, sir."

"Well I'm not murdered, but I feel like murdering some chuckle-headed idiot if I can get my hands on them. Turn him loose at once, and then drive him over here to me, and get your men out and find that girl, Miss Newton."

Miss Newton has been found, sir. She is now with her father at the Ottawa hotel.

"Then tell McLeod that I will meet him there, furnish a car for him."

Bendexter rang off and prepared to go to the Ottawa.

McLeod on being released was told of Marion's rescue and Fernie's capture. The news lifted him from the depths of despair into which he had fallen. The girl he loved was safe and he had been the means of capturing Fernie.

He took the stairs two at a time in his eagerness to reach Marion. She was seated by the radio talking to her father when she saw McLeod enter the room. With a glad cry "Armand!" she was folded in his embrace while Sir Herbert, glaring at McLeod bit savagely at the end of his cigar. It was thus that Bendexter found them when he came in.

Shaking hands with Sir Herbert he turned to the couple in the middle of the room and said, "Mr. McLeod, I have come in the name of Canada, to thank you for your zeal in safeguarding her interests, also to apologize for the foolish blunder that put you in jail when you should have been going to Miss Marion's aid. You must tell me later Miss Marion how you escaped. Meanwhile, it has been a strenuous time and I think some rest is the order for all. I shall expect you all to dinner tonight when we will celebrate our triumph."

The Premier went out, leaving Sir Herbert with the young people. He, having chewed his cigar up to the ash and evidently having derived much pleasure from doing so, spat it out and approached McLeod.

"Armand McLeod," he said "I called you a coward and struck you. For that I humbly apologize, you are no coward. But for putting my daughter second to your own ideals, I can never forgive you," he stamped away to his room in high dudgeon.

"Whatever does daddy mean?" asked Marion as they seated themselves on the lounge, "he has been raving against you ever since we came to the hotel."

"He means dear, that I left you in Fernie's hands, when I might have rescued you. That I put my country in front of my love. That I took chance of sacrificing your life in order to save Canada. Now that you know the truth I will go. I had intended asking you to be my wife when this trouble was over but that is past. What I have done will always be a barrier between us. I love you so, Marion, but Canada was my first love and I cannot ask you to be the second."

He rose wearily, "I shall go north tomorrow. Good by dear."

Her arms drew him back to the couch.

"You must not leave me. I love you Armand, and as to taking my second place, why dear, you could not do other than you did and still be a true Canadian, My Canadian."

Some few weeks after the events just recorded. We were seated in the gallery of the Great Council Hall in the parliament buildings in Ottawa.

Premier Bendexter had called what was known as the "World Court" together and the ambassadors and plenipotentiaries, were in their places. We had been awaiting some considerable time, watching the late arrivals, when who should we see but our friends, Marion and McLeod, followed by Claire and Sergeant.

Browning was in a wheel chair that was pushed by the irrepressible Frenchy, whom no injuries seemed able to keep down. Something about the appearance of the two couples lead the Author to think that they had not waited for him to be present at the wedding, but had (speaking in the vernacular) "gone and done it." Anyway, they looked happy. Sir Herbert and Lemieux brought up the rear, evidently Marion's father had—listen, the Premier of Canada has come and is speaking.

"Gentlemen, of the World Court. You are here in response to the invitation extended to your several countries to send representatives to this court. There are many matters of international importance to be discussed, but there is one that demands first place and I shall ask the indulgence of the court, while I place this matter before it. I must start at the beginning."

"All of you know that several years ago an inventor named 'Sevogle' crossed the Atlantic ocean with the formula of a very deadly weapon. You all know how deadly this weapon was and that Sevogle was supposed to have been drowned at sea, when the vessel on which he was travelling sank in a storm."

He was not drowned, but was rescued by a Canadian patrol boat. He afterwards died and bequeathed his invention to Canada. He was a Canadian by birth. Canada still has this weapon.

"It is indeed a terrible thing. No defence is known against it and we have kept this weapon, not to make war on our fellow-men, but to ensure peace for ourselves. We hold it in the light of a trust."

"Certain peoples, I shall mention no names here, conceived the idea of acquiring this engine of destruction for selfish purposes. To this end they endeavoured to break the nerve of the Canadian people so that they would rise and overthrow the government. The same methods have been tried and have succeeded elsewhere. They did not succeed in Canada."

"An effort was made to steal Canada's trust. It failed. The ringleader and his pawns have been arrested and have confessed to the plot. We know who all the high personages are who are interested in it, and we serve notice to these men that Canada is barred to all of them. Canadians as a people, have no use for any organization that will not abide by Canada's laws."

Now gentlemen, the country that I am honored to represent has maintained herself in peace for the last one hundred years. She has not interfered in any other country's politics or policies. For two hundred we have lived at peace with our great neighbour of the south.

Ten years ago Canada was made Judge for the "World Court." She accepted the responsible position and in that capacity has tried to be fair and just. She has settled disputes among you, averted wars, and what has she gained?

"An enemy crept into her land and like a malignant disease began eating her vitals. Through the courage and self-sacrifice of a true Canadian the country was cleansed of the cancer. It is my duty to tell you that Canada, having cleaned her house will keep it clean, AT ANY COST."

When money is plentiful you need Fire Insurance, but when it is scarce and it would be impossible for you to replace your home if fire destroyed it you need it much more, and it is one safeguard that costs very little and should be carried by everyone, especially in the fall of the year when the pipes rusted and clogged with snot, do not stand the heavy firing which the cold weather makes necessary and many fires are the result. FOOD FOR THE TEETH
Science now feels quite positive that certain foods, if eaten daily, aid remarkably in the prevention of tooth decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea. Opinion is still divided as to why this is so, but dieting experiments have proved quite conclusively that for some reason or other certain foods have these valuable attributes. The following diet is suggested: Two full sized (8 oz.) glasses of fresh orange juice with the juice of half a lemon in each; one to two eggs; 1/4 to two pints of milk; 1/4 to 1/2 head lettuce two different vegetables once or twice a day; 1/4 to 1/2 pound of fruits other than citrus; meat (not fried) once or twice a day; other foods as desired.

This may look like a lot of food but really most of it is the kind of light balancing food we need—filled with vitamins minerals and salts.
